"DON CHAOTIC"

IT seemed that every time my friends started to talk about the greatest books ever written, at least one of them would mention "Don Quixote". This was a classic written a long time ago by a Spaniard. It was a story about a character who toured the continent on a horse, accompanied by a faithful servant . . . Sancho Pancho, or some such thing like that. Anyway, this creep Quixote thought of himself as a bold and heroic adventurer, and as a result, he was always getting into trouble. There was the time, for example, when he saw a windmill for the first time in his life . . . I guess it was in Holland, although I could be wrong. Anyway, Quixote figured this windmill and its moving arms was some kind of armored warrior, ready to do battle. So this creep Quixote rushed at the windmill with his lance pointed at this strange "enemy". I think the Spaniard was knocked off his horse helter skelter and thrown for a loop. What a dumb guy. Tilting with a windmill!

Well, you're probably wondering why I'm bringing up the subject of Don Quixote, eh? Very simple. I sorta got intrigued with the story of the wandering Spaniard and read the book. Well, I want to tell you . . . the scrapes that character got himself into on those long journeys! It was hard for me to believe that a man could really be so stupid as to tilt at windmills and fall prey to numerous and sundry other incidents and accidents which any guy in his right mind . . . well, he was nuts!

So what did I decide to do? Silly question! I made up my mind to buy a horse, hire a servant, and take the same trip Quixote did . . . only, of course, I would react like a normal human being when strange new sights met my baby blue eyes. I was no dope like this Quixote guy. So I bought a white horse. I hired a Spanish manservant and named him Sancho Pansy. That was as close as I cared to get to the original in the book. For Pansy, I bought a donkey. He would have to follow me around Europe on the donkey and like it! Finally, I gave myself a new name to conform with my new role in life . . . I was Don Chaotic, take it or leave it!

So the horse, the donkey, my man Pansy and me . . . we took a slow freighter to Holland. You see, I wanted to start with the windmills! It was a pleasant crossing, and we got to the homeland of the Dutch in due time. After the usual formalities with the customs officials, I managed to get my beautiful white charger and the donkey onto dry land. Pansy had already been briefed as to his duties during this tour with me, and he kept his eyes and ears open, and his mouth shut. I liked it that way. I intended to do all the talking myself, composing my great book as I went along. And Pansy was to copy down what I said . . . all the pearls and gems of wisdom I should spout. Later on, I would be able to make use of these notes to write the book itself.

So we mounted our animals and took off! I must admit it was a mighty funny sight, me on my horse and Pansy on the jackass, making our way through the busy streets of the city. People stared at us as we went along and there was loud laughter mingled with expressions of surprise and astonishment. I guess I couldn't exactly blame them. They had no way of knowing the purpose behind this two-animal caravan. Probably most of them had never heard of Don Quixote, the original traveler. But for the benefit of those who did know the story and would be interested in knowing the purpose of my journey, I decided to stop at a stationery store and buy a big piece of white paper and a black crayon.

It only took a minute to write out in big, bold letters: DON CHAOTIC, Continental Traveler. I tied the sign to the side of my horse, for all to see. Then, as we went along, I would smile at the puzzled passersby and point to the sign. They looked at it and suddenly burst into long-bursting laughter. They did know the story of the original Don Quixote, the Spaniard who had journeyed through their land in literature . . . and I guess the idea that in these modern times another character was trying the same thing really tickled their funny bone. The name I had given myself no doubt added to their merry laughter. I had to admit to myself that Don Chaotic was a queer name for a traveler!

At last we got out into the country. I was glad to leave the big city behind. The Spaniard had made most of his journey in the country, and it was there that he had had his adventures, or call them misadventures, if you want to. And, I am sorry to say, not an hour had passed before the first of my troubles began.

We had been going along nearly an hour, when the trouble started. We were passing some marshes which abounded in mosquitoes. Well, those nutty gnats seemed to have been waiting for us! In squadrons, they zoomed down on the rump of my horse and sunk their stingers into the flesh. WHAM! I felt nothing but air under me as the horse bucked and threw me way up. I landed in a ditch, and you might know it . . . the cousins of the first group of attacking mosquitoes must have been lying in wait for me, because they buzzed at me in a fury. They must have drained a couple quarts of blood out of my carcass before I climbed out of the swampy ditch onto the dirt road!

I turned toward Pansy, sitting nearby on his donkey, hoping to get some help. But there he was, my manservant, laughing at my predicament, the tears rolling down his cheeks as he roared uncontrollably. Well, this wouldn't do at all! My journey was just starting, and already the "enemy" had attacked me, and my own manservant had laughed in ridicule at me, instead of coming to my aid. This wasn't the way I had planned it at all! My horse had run some distance away. When I caught up to it, I mounted, signaled for Pansy to follow, and we went on our way. I was beginning to wonder if this had all been a mistake. Here I was, trying to retrace the route taken by the original Spanish traveler in this land, intent on not getting into trouble like he did, and already I was having a rough time. Oh well, I consoled myself, the philosophers say that sometimes a bad beginning guarantees a good ending. We'd see!

Less than an hour later, I saw! That's when it happened . . . when tragedy struck! I had come around a turn in the road, and there it was . . . a roaring monster staring me in the face! I couldn't see it too well, because those mosquitoes had bitten me around the face, among other places, and my eyes were partly swollen closed. But I peered through the narrow eyelids and saw this monster standing there! It was waving its arms at me and seemed ready to attack. Well, of course here was only one thing for me to do . . . fight back. I knew I couldn't count on help from my man Pansy, so I jumped off my horse and quickly cut off a long branch from a nearby tree. Trimming it swiftly, I fashioned a pointed spear in less than a minute. Okay, I was ready for the monster!

There it was, flailing its arms. I got on my horse again and hurled myself forward to meet the foe. I pointed the spear at the belly of the monster. CRASH! The pointed tip of the spear jammed into the monster, but wouldn't keep going through the thing. It stopped so abruptly, that the end I was holding struck me in the chest. I flew off my horse, into a bush loaded with prickles! I managed to get to my feet. Through the swollen eyelids, I could make out several people running up to the scene. They saw the spear stuck in the monster. Then they saw the sign on my horse: DON CHAOTIC. Then they burst into laughter. And what was Pansy doing all this time? He was laughing his guts out too!

I asked them what was so funny. Instead of answering, they laughed all the harder, pointing at me and at the monster. I just had to see what struck them so funny. I put my fingers to my eyes and forced open the lids. Then I saw what was so funny. The "monster" which I had attacked with my spear was . . . yeah, a windmill! Its waving "arms" were those things a windmill has that go round and round! And I had thought Don Quixote was a dope!

Well, that's about the end of my story. My journey ended on the same day it began! I had set out to prove a character in literature was off his rocker, but the tables had been turned on me! So I didn't make that continental trip on horseback after all, and I didn't write my book. After all, one story about a guy who rides forth to battle a poor, defenseless windmill is enough, right? Right!

DOCTOR PROVES NEW CHEWING GUM DISCOVERY IS SAFE, ENJOYABLE WAY TO LOSE WEIGHT!

New medical discovery helps you cut down on food intake...lets you EAT WHAT YOU WANT—YET LOSE UP TO 3-5-9 POUNDS A WEEK!

NEW YORK (Special) — Now, after years of research, medical science has found a weight-control method that lets you enjoy reducing . . . eat the foods you like and without strenuous diet, exercise or pills lose up to 3 . . . 5 . . . 9 pounds a week.

An amazing new medical discovery — in delicious chewing-gum form — controls appetite... helps you reduce safely, simply, and surely!

These are the findings an outstanding physician recently reported in one of the most highly respected medical journals!

Look at the results of his documented clinical test in a large metropolitan hospital: The test group was made up of 50 patients; their overweight varied from 12 to 102 pounds. Remarkable weight loss resulted in 90% of the cases — Average loss was almost 2½ pounds a week! Many patients lost as much as 5 to 9 pounds a week!

The patients called the treatment and the results "the easiest reducing method I've ever tried," "wonderful," "overweight will no longer be a problem for me," "so easy to take any time, anywhere!"

How did they reduce? They just chewed SLIM-MINT GUM for a few minutes before each meal — then ate normally! No side-effects were reported! No upset stomachs and giddiness! No nervousness! No allergic reactions! In fact, SLIM-MINT GUM is so safe, no prescription is needed!

What Some Happy Users Say:

Mrs. E. C. of Illinois, says: "I am using Slim-Mint Gum and think it's just great. I weighed 142 pounds when I started reducing on the Slim-Mint Gum plan — and now I weigh 129 pounds, my normal weight!"

Mrs. M. D. of Ohio: "I have been using Slim-Mint Gum for two weeks. I weighed 160 pounds at the beginning of this time —and have already lost 30 pounds! I just don't know what I would do without Slim-Mint Gum!"

Mr. E. B. of New York: "Three weeks ago, I started chewing Slim-Mint Gum before meals. Already, I have lost 18 pounds! Let me repeat: 18 pounds in 21 days! I have tried many other reducing methods but I have never found anything that compares with Slim-Mint Gum!"

30 DAY UNCONDITIONAL MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

If, after using the full package of Slim-Mint (40 tablets), you aren't delighted with the pleasant way you shed excess pounds, simply return the empty carton for a prompt and full refund, no questions asked.
